If you cannot find the answer to your question, please feel free to contact us. Need help? Contact Adaptive Accounts Support: Is an API that allows you to provide PayPal accounts through your app. You can collect all user profile information, call the Adaptive Accounts API to create a PayPal account, and redirect the user to PayPal set their password and security information for them. Typically, this API is highly vetted because you collect information about the user's pii. So if you really need that, don't choose. Third-party permissions – Ask users to give you permission to call the API on their behalf.: Third-party permissions are when you need to do something on behalf of someone else. Collecting payments doesn't need third-party permissions because the end user explicitly approves pre-approval in your case. However, if you have a use case for your app to issue refunds on behalf of your resellers, yes, you'll need to use the permissions service to get reseller consent to issue refunds from your accounts. Information tested: Basically The review team wants to make sure they can verify the cash flow. So if you can provide any information on how they can act as a seller and also as a buyer that would help. It doesn't have to be live - sandbox env should be more than enough. I've helped a few go through this process - it's actually not that bad. But it could get frustrating when there is a lack of complete information. So the more information you provide – presentations, mocking, flows, testing env/app, etc. the better it would help the application review team understand what you're trying to apply payments to. Money aggregation and money laundering are the biggest concerns to look out for – making your money trail more transparent is better and faster the process would be. good luck! Entries to B.Tech courses offered by engineering schools in India are based on jee mains scores and 12. Various private and government universities have already launched B Tech Admissions 2019. However, many alleged private colleges in India and colleges that are not associated with government colleges perform state/region wise exams for admission or have their eligibility criteria set for admission.1. State Sponsored Colleges: These colleges have their state entrance exams to enter these colleges. These colleges follow a specific eligibility criterion2. Private colleges: These colleges either accept based on a 10+2 candidate score or their respective entrance exam scores. These higher education institutions generally require students with physics and mathematics as compulsory subjects with a minimum score requirement in each subject as prescribed by them.3. Direct entry: This side entrance is introduced for students who want direct admission in the second year of their bachelor's course. However, there is a eligibility criterion for the same. Students should give as many entrance exams as possible, to expand their ability. College preferences should always be based on certain factors such as location, faculties, etc. NOOOOOO. You're talking to a military romantic crook. I received an email from the U.S. Army that directly answers your question, which is sautanic below, please continue reading. I believe you are the victim of a Military Romance scam, while the person you are talking to is a foreign national acting as an American soldier claiming to be stationed overseas on a peacekeeping mission. That's the key to the fraud they always claim to be on a peacekeeping mission. Part of their scam says they don't have access to their money, that their mission is very dangerous. If your friend's girlfriend/future spouse asks you to do the following or exhibit this behavior, it's most likely a scam: It moves to a private messaging page immediately after meeting you on Facebook or SnapChat or Instagram or some dating or social media sites. Often times you delete pages that you have encountered with them right away what you asked you to move to more private messaging siteProfesses love to you very quickly & & Cite poems and song lyrics along with using their own kind of broken language as they profess their love and devotion quickly. They also showed interest in your health and love for your family. It promises marriage as soon as it gets to the state on holiday that they have asked you to pay. It asks for money (bank transfers) and Amazon, iTune, Verizon, etc. gift cards, for medicine, religious practices, and letters to return home. internet access, complete work tasks, help a sick friend, get him out of trouble, or anything that sounds fishy. The army provides all the needs of the soldier, including food medical care and transportation for the holidays. Believe me, I've lived it, you're probably cheated. I'm just trying to show you examples that you're most likely duped. Below is the email response I received after I sent a query to the U.S. government when I found out I was being scammed. I got this wonderful answer back with lots of helpful links on how to find and report your scammer. And as you learn more about Romance Scams.Right now you can also copy the image he gave you and do a google image search and you will hopefully see pictures of the real person he is impersonating. it doesn't always work and take some digging. If you find a real person, you can directly message them and alert them that their image is being used for scamming. Good luck, and I'm sorry this could happen to you. please continue reading the government reply I got below it's very informative. You contacted an email monitoring the U.S. Army's Criminal Investigation Command. Unfortunately, it is a common problem. Please be assured that there is never any reason to send money to anyone who claims to be a soldier online. If you've only spoken to this person online, chances are they're not an American soldier at all.
